

Actions for possible cases of ballistic missile landing

In case of a ballistic missile launch with a risk of landing or passing over the Japanese territory, the Japanese government will issue a J-Alert. The radio communications for disaster prevention and administration will sound the alarms (special alarm sounds) and send area and emergency emails to provide emergency information.

Please stay calm and take immediate actions after the messages play.

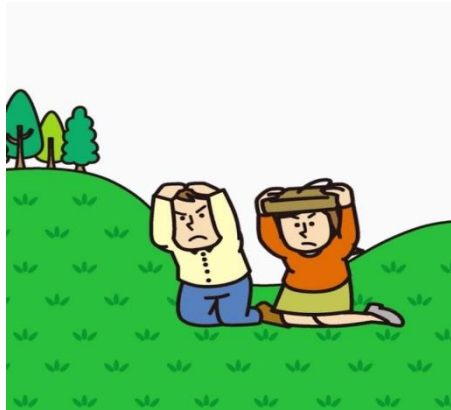

If outdoors

Take shelter in buildings and underground facilities (if possible, choose buildings with a strong structure) nearby.

If there are buildings

Take cover behind objects or lay flat on the ground and cover your head.

If indoors

Stay away from windows and if possible, find a room without windows.
